STATE OF THE MEDIA: AUDIO TODAY

A FOCUS ON AFRICAN AMERICAN
& HISPANIC AUDIENCES

APRIL 2014

GROWTH AND THE AUDIO LANDSCAPE

NATIONAL AUDIENCE HITS ALL-TIME HIGH

Growth is a popular word today in America, whether you're talking about the stock market, entertainment choices, or census trends. Through it all, radio consumption continues to increase; nearly 92% of all Americans 12 or older are tuning to radio in an average week. That's 244.4 million of us, a record high!

244 MILLION AMERICANS
LISTEN TO RADIO EACH WEEK

This growth is remarkable considering the variety and number of media choices available to consumers today over-the-air and online via smartphones, tablets, notebooks/desktop computers and digital dashboards. Radio's hyper-local nature uniquely serves each market which keeps it tied strongly to our daily lives no matter how (or where) we tune in.

The radio landscape is also a diverse community of listeners from every corner of America, who reflect the same population trends of the country as a whole. Radio is one of the original mass mediums and as the U.S. population grows and the makeup of our citizens change, radio audiences follow suit.

Alongside the national growth headline, both African American and Hispanic audiences have also reached a historic high with more than 71 million tuning in each week.

71 MILLION AFRICAN AMERICANS AND HISPANICS

The focus for this quarter's Audio Today report is the African American and Hispanic listener; combined these listeners account for nearly a third (29.6%) of the total national audience.

These multicultural audiences are highly engaged with radio all across the country, in markets large and small, where more than three thousand different stations program to them specifically.

RADIO'S LOCAL FLAVOR

Radio's hyper-local nature means the choices and media habits of audiences in each market are unique. As we look around the country at cities with both established ethnic populations as well as those where the populations are growing, it's clear that African American and Hispanic radio listeners are influenced by the distinct content offerings in each local market as they make radio a part of their daily lives.
